EAST SIDE TO BE THERE.

Prospective Bride's Father Will De sert Baxter Street After the Marriage.

All of the East Side that radiates from Baxtor stree, dozens of millionaires who body. made their start in life on that famous mon's Consumer's Ice Company are reat occasion of Sunday night, when liss Beckie Burke will become the bride of Bernard Solomon. The ceremony will be at Vienda Hall. Fifty-eighth street and Lexington avesite, and the arc fights will be tripented low and the littl eincandescents made to flicker softly, for a ton of diamonds will lend their effulgence to the accasion. The most famous headlights of the upper and lower East Side will via in brilliancy from every corner of the

Miss Burke is the daughter of Isaac Burke, of No. 2 Baxter street. For forty years Isaac Burke has sold shoes to the East Side. The day he landed in New York from Russia he began peddling shoes. Since then he has sold them wholesale and retail, and they say on Baxter street that the venerable eman is now a milionaire. Though his name is Burke and his fathers were Burkes there is not an Irish drop of blood in his veins. He has the classic features of a patriarch of Israel, and the keen, eagle eye of the sharpest or his race.

Grew Rich in Baxter Street. The Burkes are about the last of the old-time Baxter street merchants to retain their residence on the little block, and they are going uptown after Beckie's wedding. They still live in a narrow little Baxter street flat in the same humble way they have lived for four decades, but now that Beckle will socupy a fine home on Madison avenue the old folks and the boys believe the time has come for them to blossom sorth into the world of hos and cold water, poreclain baths, electric lights of the uptown pilgranage, nor as in luxurious ease on plush furniture and silken coay corners.

But Beckle and the boys insist on it.
and they will soon form Moe Levy, the Reliable Cohens, Harris and Benjamin and other militonaires who first began to raise their pije on Baxter street. Moe Levy and Isaac Burke began side by side thirty years ago, when the business rivalry on the block was at its most strenuous moment and gesture encounters often relieved the monotony of yanking out-of-town strangers into the little clothing booths.

Miss Beckle's narrow quarters in the little Baxter street flat are bursting with the accumulation of her trousseau, that is being turned out as fast as the needles of Grand street can'fly. A half down fashionable Grand street dressmakers are working on Beckle's wedding sowns, and when Isaac Burke gets the bills it is feared that he will suffer a serious palpitation.

Five hundred engraved invitations have been sent our for the wedding but several times that number are expected to attend. The Burke boys have invited all their friends in the First.

The will be there with a new materials up to the bunces, and Price, the Daxier street diamond by which a price of the Daxier street diamond by the bunces and a stray of brillmans in the form and a stray of brillmans in the stray of of Fred Fleck, Herman Bauman and Julius Bonner, with a few handsome stor, i on the breast of Tor.
